Access to a multi-disciplinary team (MDT)

Situated near the picturesque Abington Park in Northampton, our wonderful team at Loyd House supports up to 17 adults with post-acute longer-term rehabilitation, as well as management of long-term neurological conditions such as Huntington's disease, and end of life care when needed.

Our teams' goal is to help our residents lead rich, rewarding, and meaningful lives — however that looks for them. Loyd House is a homely setting for residents to choose their daily activities and access a broad range of amenities, educational and occupational opportunities, as well as social and leisure pursuits. Whether residents like to enjoy a movie or karaoke night, take part in arts and crafts activities, have a picnic in the park, go to a local café, or even out on a day trip to a major attraction in London — all residents are given the chance to do what they wish to do and feel like they are part of the Loyd House family.

Our multi-disciplinary team take pride in ensuring a positive and dignified environment for all. Residents are supported as individuals and are encouraged to maintain relationships, follow their interests, and take part in personal hobbies such as flower arranging or painting. While having the opportunity to decide what they want to do each day and have a voice at regular meetings, residents are thoughtfully and compassionately supported by all staff.

The person-led approach at Loyd House is driven through tailored support plans of positive mental and physical wellbeing that entail our pathways ethos of delivering holistic support to enable residents to live their very best life possible. Our care plans reflect a good understanding of residents' specific needs, including relevant assessments of communication support and sensory needs as well as personal care preferences.

Residents are listened to and are made to feel as comfortable and as empowered as possible. Our highly skilled team's holistic approach is necessary to ensure those in our care are safe, happy, and healthy. With years of experience and through tailored person-centred and evidence-based therapy programmes, we work with our residents, their families, and key professionals, to develop therapeutic relationships that help to maximise independence and recovery.

All of the 17 bedrooms at Loyd House come with an ensuite bathroom, and we support residents to furnish their rooms in their own style with their own possessions around them. Four of the rooms form our transitional living unit on the top floor with a lounge area for residents who are ready for more independent living.

There is a lift for wheelchair users, and our communal lounge, activities room and dining room are welcoming spaces for residents to interact and spend time together in a community environment. The communal therapy kitchen offers cooking and laundry facilities for those who still require some support but have progressed further in their rehabilitation journey. Residents may spend time in the relaxing courtyard garden that is decked and has pots of beautiful flowers, while our fully equipped therapy room and therapy gym offer residents a focused place to work together with specialised therapists on their recovery and rehabilitation.

"We've always been delighted with the care we've seen staff give. Always respectful and caring and talking with residents."
